“How to Use Language Appropriately and Effectively with Both Families and Clinicians”

Braden Josephson, Ph.D., BCBA-D &
Rachel Scott-Rosenbluth, M.S., BCBA, LBA

Register by completing the link below:

Description: As a behavior analyst, it's important to use language appropriately with a variety of audiences. Sometimes, we are not technical enough when speaking with fellow clinicians and other times we use too much technical language when speaking with families. In this training the following learning objectives will be addressed. You be able to: 1) Identify the rationale behind the importance of fluency with technical and non-technical verbal behavior 2) Identify how to explain behavior concepts using non-technical language (families) 3) Identify how to explain behavior concepts using technical language (clinicians) 4) Understand some soft skills that help parents navigate both the diagnosis and the treatment that will follow.

Our Presenters: Dr. Braden Josephson is the President/CCO of City Pro Group (CPG) and Applied Behavioral Interventions (ABI). Dr. Josephson has been working in the field of pediatric assessment and treatment of Autism Spectrum Disorders for the last 25 years. He regularly gives presentations, guest lectures and workshops to parents, graduate students and licensed clinicians. He also supervises limited permittees behavioral analysts in New York as they work toward getting their LBAs. He is a licensed psychologist and a licensed behavior analyst in New York and Rhode Island.

Rachel Scott-Rosenbluth, BCBA, LBA, is the Clinical Director of ABI and has worked as a BCBA in both California and Massachusetts prior to coming to ABI. She also supervises BCBA candidates prior to them sitting for the BCBA exam.
